THE LATE AARON BURR

The quiet erection of a tombstone over his unmarked grave, in the Princeton yard, has called to mind the name of Aaron Burr. Near fifty eventful years of our country's history have come and gone since his strange and brilliant career was run, during which time many things have occurred to call his memory from oblivion; but scarcely a breath of air—certain-ly not a regretful sigh—has borne it from the His was not one of the few immortal names that were not born to die; at least for the present, the world has agreed to forget him. Possibly it means no reflection thereby. It has also forgotten the lamented John Wells, Jacob Van Veethen and Elisha Williams, his brilliant competitors at the bar. Even Hamilton, his target victim, is no longer remembered.

As for Burr, there are many reasons why he should have been so soon forgotten. Tradition and legend have handed down his name blackened by every crime. Long before his death, iant light no longer attracted the flitting moths ; but it cannot be disguised that those had forgotten, who should have remembered him; he was shunned in the street; his friends did not know him; if pointed out at a distance, it was one who had the accursed mark of Cain upon him.

We do not know a sublimer picture than that presented by this celebrated man, in the last hours of declining life. His early course had been peculiarly successful. He was a soldier of the revolution, distinguished for courage, and skill, and activity; his reputation had been high at the bar, as a trusty consellor and eloquent advocate; he had been a successful politician, admired for his tact, and loaded with the favors of the people; he had also been Vice President of the United States, and presided over the Senate with impartiality and dignity; as he concluded his farewell address, there was not a dry eye in the chamber. Added to all these public honors, happy domestic relations were the crowning jewels of his happiness. He was proud of his descent from two of the best of the houses of Edward and Burr. He had the choicest education that could be afforded, and his proficiency was such as to make his person, intelligent in mind, and gifted with a lively fancy and a brilliant imagination. These But it is bound by no party trammels, yields to no natural gifts had been cultivated by the most careful education. The conversation of the daughter, when a child, was the delight of the father; when a matron, his pride. Given to the man, scholar, and successful statesman, she was opposition shall last.

Deeply regretting the existence of slavery, we the mother of a beautiful son, not more the parent's joy than the grandfather's pride .-This little pledge that the family should not die and become extinct, also bore the name of Aaron Burr. Thus happy in his public relations and domestic circle, connected with the past by proud and glorious remembrances, with the future by a golden link, what was wanting to fill up the cup of his happiness? Nothing, perhaps, save that right judgment of Solomon, races; and expect that our children, if not ourselves Athenian, the happiest of men, in preference to exert over Africa an influence not unlike that which the proud and wealthy Lydian King.

A fearful rencontre drove Aaron Burr, the soldier, the statesman, an outlaw from the land. A price was set upon his head. He guise from the face of man. He was tried for treason, and his fair fame was blackened forever. His small fortune gradually melted awayhe was a wanderer and beggar upon the face of the earth. VASTNESS OF THE ERIE RAILROAD.-What a vast work the Erie Railroad is, we have an idea of in the recent address, which the President, Mr. Loder, has published to some of the stockholders. The road including all its assetts, property, and effects of every name and description, has cost the stockholders up to March 1st, 1853, $30,577,542.
